All The Eggs In One Basket

The frightening aftermath of the electric power foul-up that paralyzed New York City and panicked millions in the Northeast Tuesday night is coming to the surface.

No one knows what started the foul-up. The hard fact that has come out of an emergency which scared the country stiff is that the whole thing could happen again. With no specific cause to blame, the engineers responsible for providing continuous electrical service do not know where to make changes. Politicians do not know where to pin responsi-

Investigators do not know where to look The puzzle is too big an order for technicians.

It even looks too tough for scientists, who will tackle anything, secure in the belief they need nothing but facts to solve all humanity's puzzlements-

All but one Humanity never has learned how to put all its eggs in one basket without risking the loss of the eggs if anything happens to the basket. IN THIS AGE of electricity, all our eggs are in one basket-the electric power supply.

We assume the supply will be adequate and continuous One of the triumphs of the 20th century has been the electrical industry's ability to command confidence. In less than a generation, the industry has transformed electrical service from the haphazard thing it was in the early days and still is most places in the world to something we take for granted.

The question raised in the aftermath of the Northeast's electric power failure is whether we have taken too much for granted-whether Americans can logically entrust themselves to a service not as fool-proof as they thought it was-whether it is time now for philosophers to sit down with scientists, engineers, technicians and corporate chiefs to examine the implications of a way of life that can be snuffed out instantaneously

IF IT CAN happen as casually and disastrously as it happened in the Northeast Tuesday night, the implications of what could be made to happen by intent or military attack are too horrible to think about.

But thinking now is unavoidable.

Once more, as so often before, an unforeseen disaster has caused the nation to grope for a wider margin of security.

Once more, the basket with all the eggs in it has slipped from human grasp.

Don't Let It Happen

There is no issue about admitting the Chinese People's Republic to the United Nations, as far as the United States is concerned officially.

The U.S. government and the preponderant weight of U.S. opinion are against admitting the Chinese Communists to an organization they have defied and which they do not respect.

If they were let in by some twist of diplomatic hocus-pocus, the United States would have to get out. Legislative opinion would not tolerate the continued support of the United Nations by the U.S. Treasury. Popular opinion would not tolerate the continued support of the United Nations by the U.S. government.

On this basis, the matter is closed.

But there is another basis-and that is why the matter stays open. Not many Americans believe in this other basis, but many non-Americans do.

On the other basis, membership in the United Nations is not determined by considerations of right and wrong. It is determined solely by considerations of international diplomatic procedure.

The Chinese People's Republic would be admitted on this other basis because of convenience and expediency.

Quick communication with spokesmen for its government would be facilitated.

Peking's policy on any given subject could be learned by asking its U.N. representatives. From the standpoint of some foreign governments, admitting Red China would be worth the effort if it did no more than force a showdown on Nationalist China. That is, of course, another reason the United States wants to keep the Chinese People's Republic out of the United Nations.

This government has a moral commitment to the Nationalist Chinese

No other government, it is said, mixes morality with international politics. The United States

If the other nations disregard this, they should be forewarned that admitting Chinese Communists to the United Nations would force the United States out of it and ultimately force the United Nations out of the United States

Sweet Unity, Where Art Thou?

Canada is taken for granted so trustingly by Americans no one ever thinks of serious trouble north of the border

It is a fact, though, that Canadian politics is in a state of turmoil and this week's election did not produce the unity Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson hoped would be produced.

The Liberal party in Canada, like the Labor party in Britain, is hanging on to power by its political fingernails. Conservatives are within reaching distance of power

Prime Minister Pearson, an affable man of high personal caliber, cannot open a gap between himself and his party rival, the aging John Diefenbaker. There is evidence that many Canadians are fed up with both of them and their cries for unity when there is no unity and not likely to be any.

It is possible Canadians have rejected the possibility of unity and adopted a pattern of political thought widely used south of their border-the chronic disunity of the United

In this country, when a politician talks about unity he is yearning for the impossible. Unity is the antithesis of political freedom-the denial of two-party government-the first and most ominous sign of one-party rule.

In union there is strength, granted. But in the contrary opinion that is the bulwark of Canadians are in no immediate danger of political unity. It has eluded most of the people who sought it in the 20th century, excepting Italians under Mussolini, Germans under Hitler, Russians under Stalin and the Japanese under Tojo.

They turn to the losing candidates in November elections still brooding over that moment of truth which shattered their hopes between the closing of the polls and completion of the vote tally

We think compassionately of seasonal entrepreneurs who took a lacing last summer and are thinking about getting into something steadier before another summer comes.

Our sympathy goes to the plucky fellows who work for public utilities and must face the prospect of going out in blizzards to maintain services that people expect to be maintained regardless of weather.

Whenever we admire a cock pheasant strutting across the road or through a stubblefield, we ask why anvone would want to shoot off his head, then realize we know the answer. It is because he is beautiful and struts.

We feel the same way about rabbits. Why must they be fired at with shotguns by people who do not need rabbit meat to survive? It is because they scamper away from oncoming doom. If they sat still, their chances of survival would do better.

This year, we will give special thought to all the people in South Viet Nam, not because this is the melancholy season there but because it's the melancholy season here. We will think about all the people who live there and will still be there when the shooting is over, and we think about all the people who have gone there to help the people who live there kill one another. That is a melancholy thought.

Tourists Take Over

Tourists are replacing banditi on the onetime "forgotten island" of Sardinia. The Mediterranean isle 120 miles west of the Italian mainland is losing its reputation as Italy's wild and woolly frontier. Brigands and vendettas earned it a reputation as "Italy's wild west." Now marinas, villas and luxury hotels have transformed Sardinia's bleakly beautiful northeast shoreline into the "Emerald Coast." Sudden rises in land values have sent some lucky farmers into a happy state of shock.

Yet, as D. H. Lawrence wrote, most of Sardinia remains "outside the circuit of civilization." A National Geographic article said "the main feature of a Sardinian landscape is its

Sheep and goats outnumber people two to one, reflecting the deeply embedded agricultural economy. The perky Sardinian burro, hardly bigger than a goat, is still used for inter-village transportation. Food For Thought

Letter From Max

Everybody this past week seems to have been asking everybody else, "Did you get invited to any parties for Princess Margaret?'

Well, Twill, did you?

When it was first announced she was coming to this country, everybody in our block figured she was coming to repay your visit of a couple years ago to England. We had read about your

But then it turned out she planned to pay her respects to Hollywood royalty first.

Don't let this discourage you. Many a working stiff has escalated his social status in a flash like an H-bomb.

There are even places you can rent the proper clothes, if worse comes to worse. But stay away from skin-tight beige pants. They are out this

And has it struck you that with all of this rivalry over whether Ericson or Columbus discovered America, that the Beatles discovered America before Princess Margaret did?

After Queen Elizabeth II gave the Beatles that honor for bringing back so much loot from this former colony, the Princess decided she should take a personal look at us, too

AS A SOMETIME traveler, you can appreciate the hardships she is undergoing. Living out of a suitcase, arranging for plane or train tickets, getting laundry done, never knowing which restaurants and hairdressers are adequate, making sure of hotel reservations. It's a rat race.

You can understand that such a royal life can be arduous because all the time she and Lord Snowdon would much rather live quietly and unobstentatiously in their Londo their country place, or that secret hideaway flat we have heard about, oo-la-la Thinking about the Beatles, which I do very rarely, calls to mind the earlier days when the British extorted treasure from this land. That led to the Revolutionary War.

The Beatles have a somewhat similar racket, if you'll pardon the expression, but they do it with more finesse than their ancestors.

However, there have been cries of anguish raised here at their tactics. Their appearances have been marked by riots and violence reminiscent of the perilous days of 1776.

Some hard-core Yankees might even go so far as to claim the Beatles' technique is more cruel and more painful than those of the British profiteers of colonial days.

THIS REALLY does not have much to do with Princess Margaret's visit, except to provide background.

Despite your own humble beginnings, we all know you will do us proud when you entertain the Princess and her Lord. And whatever you do don't address her as "Meg.

You would do some of us a favor if you asked her what Prince Philip is really like. He is her brother-in-law, you know

You may want to make a note of this so you don't forget it: He is officially H.R.H. Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh, the husband of Queen Elizabeth II, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and of her other realms and territories. Queen. Head of the Commonwealth, Defender of the Faith.

Anyway, if you miss Meg this trip, keep this in mind for next time

Faithfully yours,

(Note: As is so often the case, I was at liberty to go to the parties, even to entertain the Snowdons personally, but the matter just never came to the attention of the other persons concerned.)

EDITOR OF THE REVIEW

Where do foster children come from? A question frequently asked about foster children is: "Where do they come from?" The answer is simple: From your own back yard! They make up part of your community; they are the children of the folks you call neighbors.

Keeping this idea in mind gives the key to the answer of related questions - Are foster children healthy? Are they of normal intelligence? Do they have behavior problems?

For a fairly safe norm in arriving at correct answers, just apply these questions to the children who come "right from your own back what applies to the children you know, applies to our foster children because our foster children are not exceptional or extraordinary. They are little American boys and girls like those you know. They are extraordinary, however, in one respect, which accounts for their being foster children. One of their parents might be ill, or have passed away and the other parent has to work. Or their parents just cannot provide a home for them.

Indeed the theme which runs through the pathetic tale of foster children is found in the phase "homes broken." So many social factors strike at society's basic unit, the home: illness, marital discord, death, desertion of parents, parents inability to manage and care for children. All these answer the question, "Where do foster children come from?'

A Real Shock

By David Lawrence

Power Failure Stirs Thoughts

What happened on Tuesday night, Nov. 9, 1965. yet may become known as the electric shock that changed history. A spectacular example of how the lives of 30 million people are adversely affected without a moment's warning can only bring to mind what the mechanical devices of modern science can do to the life of a people, either by accident or intent. The mere fact that lots of persons thought immediately of sabotage when the impact of the electric-power failure hit many of the cities and towns simultaneously in eight David Lawrence states is an indication of how sensitive the nation is to the possibility of sudden war in a nuclear

Whether the true cause of the interruption of electric-power service will ultimately be found attributable to man's failure or to the breakdown of a piece of machinery, there always will be the thought that a secret agent who knows the location of vulnerable spots in the power system can inflict colossal damage without being observed or detected.

There may be ways to reduce the potential harm that can be done by tampering with the electric-wire apparatus of the country, and alternate systems for emergency doubtless can be devised. The feeling of apprehension will continue, however, because in a nuclear age it is not just the dropping of a bomb that would be planned by the enemy but preliminary moves which could first paralyze the business and economic life of the country through instantaneous sabotage of vital facilities.

WHAT IT ALL emphasizes is that secrecy and clandestine operations by an enemy government constitute a danger that has not been eliminated and that will require the pursuit of more intensive crusades which seek to convince all peoples that theoretical peace does not assure a comfortable peace.

As long as there is friction in the world and governments, while professing to be interested in peace, carry on subversion and infiltration inside other countries, there will be widespread fear. The two major Communist countries-Russia and Red China - continue to assert their right to go into other countries and establish secret agencies for the purpose of performing acts of sabotage at critical moments.

Outwardly, all the principal governments in the world today claim to be interested in maintaining peace. But threats of war continue, and the possibility of a nuclear clash is always present. There are, to be sure, intermitten negotiations designed to get agreements which would limit the use of nuclear weapons or reduce the stockpiles but no concerted movement has been undertaken as yet to abolish all nuclear bombs so the world would be completely rid of the menace to civilization that now exists. Such a program for real disarmament is, of course, impossible as long as there is mutual distrust.

ALL THIS background may have no immediate connection with the electric power failure In the United States this week but millions of people did associate it instantly with the possibility that acts of this kind, even though accidental in this instance, could some night become intentional and be part of an effort to weaken the strongest country in the world.

There are ways, of course, to protect the military operations by alternate systems of electrical power and communication and undoubtedly industry can similarly be protected by auxiliary

The idea that, despite modern mechanical progress, it's feasible for somebody with a handful of tools to sever a major power line in an unknown spot and put a nation in darkness for several hours is a worrisome thought for the American people today.

It points up the urgent need for renewed efforts to bring governments closer together so they may realize that peace is really a common objective and that a nuclear war would be suicidal.

Sometimes it takes unrelated incidents to awaken the conscience of mankind. The electric power failure in the United States unquestionably will stimulate a significant discussion not only in this country but in other countries throughout the world.

word "Roger" after the tower aged extensively.

The speaker's table was centered with a world globe of chrysanthemums, made by Miss Catherine Franzetta, encircled by flags of all nations. White tapers in gold holders completed the setting.

Miss Witt introduced Mrs. Kathryn James of Uhrichsville, director of District 8, who paid her official visit. She told of unlimited associations with women of diversified businesses and professions and advised the group "they should give time, talent and money for full value." She reminded of the state board sessions Jan. 22-23 at Columbus open to all federation members. Mrs. James was presented a gift.

RECOMMENDATIONS of the executive board included the nomination of Mrs. Ethel Lynn Wambaugh as state first president and that of Mrs. Doris McKinnon as a member of the state nominating committee.

A communication was read relative to acquiring an option for the site of the first retirement home in Cincinnati.

Mrs. Mary McCullough asked for contributions for the bake sale of the NIKE Club to be held Nov. 20 at Hills Store. She said the annual Christmas party of the Child Health Clinic will be held Dec. 19 at the Elks Club ball room.

Reports were heard from Mrs. Betty Reed, personal development; Mrs. Mildred Urie, federation, and Miss Olive Williamson, mutual service.

Mrs. Pat Kapp, chairman of the membership committee, conducted a quiz of scrambled names of members prepared by Mrs. Anna May Weeda.

The tables were decorated with arrangements of yellow chrysanthemums, flags and white tapers in silver candelabra. Mrs. Louise Van Fossen won a prize.

The next session will be the Christmas party and gift exchange on Dec. 8 at the hotel when the executive board will have charge of arrangements.

STRAIGHT TALK from WOHI'S Owner

ABOUT THE PROGRAM CHANGES ON MONDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1965

Many listeners have complained to us about the accuracy of our weather forecasts. "Why can't you do something about them?" they ask.

On Monday, November 15, we will. We have retained Weather Forecasters Inc., to prepare weather forecasts specifically for our area. These reports, updated three times a day, will predict the weather with an accuracy you have never dreamed possible.

In addition to the short forecasts, we will have weather programs, three of them at 7:05 A.M., in the Noon News, and at 5:05 P.M. Monday through Friday; On Saturday at 7:05 A.M. and at Noon; and Sunday at 8:05 and Noon.

Over the past five years, we have made many changes in our operations to provide more news, better entertainment, and a higher level of public service to our audience. Now, we have turned our attention to our commercials. WOHI's advertising has been so effective for our clients that they demand us more and more. There have been times, we admit, when our commercials have been too frequent; there have been advertisements which were annoying.

Effective November 15, we have taken steps to improve this situation. A complete commercial policy has been adopted, which we will be sharing with those advertisers who have been using us without any guidelines. If you wish, we will be glad to share it with you, when you visit our studios.

Commercials on radio pay for radio, It's as simple as that. But a good commercial keeps the audience it's designed to reach. We think that WOHI will be an even better service with the new policies in force.

These changes, and others like them, are considered and adopted from time to time here at WOHI not to just change, but to improve. To grow, our station must serve the audience better so we can get more advertising support so we can serve the audience better. Good radio serves a community and sells.

Somebody asked me recently what our goal was here at. WOHI. My answer:

> "We want to make WOHI the finest station of its power in the United States; worthy of its support, serving its audience, and building with our area to meet the challenge of tomorrow."

It is our hope that you feel we have travelled, in some small way at least, along the path to that goal.

The Sports Potters Looking For First In 8 Seasons Bench

Review Sports Editor

Grand Finales . . .

The percentage of winning predictions continued to climb last week, making the last half of the 1965 season more enjoyable.

The batting average hit .818, with nine right and two wrong on last week's card. One miss came when we picked Beaver Local to nip Toronto. The Beavers came close, but didn't quite make it. The other was Sebring's rout of Leetonia.

The two leading contests this week, East Liverpool at Alliance and Wellsville at Beaver Local, will take some figuring. Both games should go down to the Taking a close look at the Potter-Alliance fray, we are impressed by the Aviators' schedule and their defensive line. Although Alliance has only a 3-6 record, the game is on the Aviator's home field, and they have played the best in the state.

It also is the final game of the season for 20 Potter seniors and 17 Alliance seniors who will be going all out to wind up their high school careers. We are picking Alliance by a touchdown, with a close battle expected. Let's hope we're wrong.

Turning to Saturday's Beaver-Tiger encounter, the fans are looking for a scoring battle between Larry Roberts and Chris Thornton. But defense could be the key, so we will lean to Beaver Local.

The remainder of tonight's schedule looks this way: United to romp to its ninth straight over winless Lisbon, which has had its problems this season; Stanton over Smithfield and Columbiana over East Palestine in a close one

Toronto shouldn't have any trouble at Southern Local and Salem is picked to nip West Holmes. In Saturday's other contest, West Branch rates a big advantage over Leetonia

This'N That In Sports ...

WITH the 1965 football season taking its final bow this weekend, basketball gets ready to move onto the local sports stage.

At East Liverpool, the Potters will be getting off to a late start in basketball, since practice won't begin until Nov. 15, two weeks later than any other school in the state. This comes as the result of a local ruling made last spring by the high school to avoid "conflicting interests" or having two sports overlapping.

This puts the rush on the basketball program, since the Potters must participate in a preview five days later (Nov. 20)

The first game for Coach Frank Chan's team will be Dec. 4 with Mayfield Heights, a new opponent. The game will be played here. Mayfield Heights is from the Cleveland area

DENNY BURKE, the hard-hitting 150-pound fullback for the Potters a year ago, is a member of the Baldwin-Wallace jayvee team. Denny has been playing fullback and linebacker and last Saturday dressed for the varsity game against Heidelberg College and saw Looking ahead has helped 11 more than one underdog pull off an upset and it would seem to be one of the few hopes the Hoosiers and Panthers can muster for Saturday's games.

North Carolina, 4-5, is in much the same position against fourth-ranked Notre Dame which walloped Pitt 69-13 last week. The Irish have won five straight since losing their second game of the season against Purdue and seem to be picking up momentum for their big clash with the Spartans next Saturday.

Michigan State, of course, has the incentive to wrap up its first Big Ten crown and insure itself of a trip to the Rose Bowl and with the firepower provided by Clint Jones' explosive running. the Spartans are not expected to trip over the Hoosiers.

QUESTION: How many molecules make up an atom?

ANSWER: The question actually should be, how many atoms

Break down substances as far as you can go, and you get elements, or basic substances. The smallest bit of an element is an atom, like an extremely minute solar system. There is a nucleus in the center, like the sun, with one or more smaller electrons, circling around, like the planets, only at inconceivable speed. We show an atom of hydrogen; the single electron dashes around the central nucleus at such furious speeds that its paths make a kind of shell. Atoms of different elements may combine with each other, such a combination being a molecule. As atoms may be different, so the combinations making molecules may be different. Each kind of substance we see is composed of a great many of its own special molecules, like the water molecule we show, which has one atom of oxygen and two of hydrogen. Many of these molecules together make up water. Since different kinds of molecules may have different numbers of atoms, it is impossible

Dear Heloise: After reading closet when you were going the hint from a teacher concerning the method she used for teaching pupils to add (cutting washed and ironed or freshly large numbers from a calendar and forming problems on her table). I'd like to offer my solution to that same problem:

I taught my children to add by using Dominoes.

This was so successful that my daughter now uses this same method with her children. Besides being educational, the children enjoy playing the

DEAR HELOISE: Sandwich bags are ideal for storing quilt pieces. I keep pieces for each block in a separate bag.

DEAR HELOISE: I've found another use for the plastic, sniptop detergent bottles.

I fill one with liquid floor wax from the large container, and just squeeze the bottle gently and it squirts out the exact amount of wax I need for each area of the floor.

Another advantage is that I don't have to lug around the heavy can of wax somewhere in a hurry, and thought the dress had been cleaned, only to find out, too late, that it was wrinkled or had a spot on it:

True, you wore it only once, and it's wearable again some places. . . .

I used to do this all the time until I learned that after I had worn a garment, if I would hang it back on the hanger wrong - side - out I could tell, at a glance, that it had been worn before.

Also saves on laundry, as I found that now I will invariably grab this garment first when going to the store, or for wear around the house. Keeps me on my toes trying to put and keep all clean things in my closet.

I have also learned to turn sweaters wrong - side-out after wearing them once! Remember that body oils rot and fade fabrics.

Never pack anything away for a season that has not been properly washed or cleaned. By using the Heloise method, you will know at a glance.

DEAR HELOISE: After turning my sewing box upside down each time I needed some colored thread, I hit upon the following solution:

I strung 22 spools of different colored thread onto a piece of heavy cord, and tied the ends of the cord together.

Now I can find any color thread without any searching. I just break off as much as I need. The spool spins on the cord when pulling off the the desired length, so that it is not necessary to remove a spool from the cord itself.
